Sue was to all men, regardless of color or race.

Having built up his argument on this line, he proceeded to show the aparrant ir justice of the attitude of the Southeen States in depriving Negroes of their votes and still maintaining their representation in the House of Representatives. He pointed out the wrong of allowing a member of the House to maintain his seat with a construency of less than eighteen hundred or fiteen hundren votes from one state and compelling another state to base its representation upon a vote of more th n forty thousand

The effort Mr Miller and his friends ing. the opposition was led by Mr. Rogers, who maintained that the matter was not a question which the club might property consider and that it needed academic, not partisan, discussion.
